Did you know about our Student Designated Contact Persons Panel?

All incidents will be acknowledged and thoroughly investigated mindful of the survivor's wishes and our duty of care to the campus community ensuring that UL provides a safe, positive, and respectful work, study, extracurricular and social environment space where students and staff thrive, flourish, and develop to their full potential.

The Student Designated Contact Persons Panel (SDCPP) has been established to support students who may have experienced or are currently experiencing incidents of sexual harassment and sexual violence. They will act as a sounding board providing a complainant with information in relation to supports and reporting options should they wish to avail of them.

Members of the SDCPP are staff volunteers who know and understand the institution's environment and are familiar with the institution's sexual harassment and sexual violence policies and procedures and have been trained to act as a first point of contact.

Stakeholder Engagement

A photograph of a university campus at sunset. In the background, a large, modern building with a curved glass facade is visible. The foreground shows a grassy lawn with several people walking. The scene is bathed in the warm, golden light of the setting sun, with trees showing autumn foliage. There are decorative graphic elements: a large green shape in the top left corner, a dark green horizontal bar on the left side containing the text, and a yellow L-shaped graphic in the lower middle area.
